

NASCAR Teams
Continue to Flock to Gresham

JEFFERSON, Ga. – Gresham Motorsports Park continues to be a haven for NASCAR testing as more and more teams are finding the GMP half-mile paved oval to their liking.

The most recent organization to hit the GMP high banks was Red Horse Racing – a NASCAR Camping World Truck Series team. The team, which features drivers Timothy Peters and Justin Lofton, spent two days at the track this week tweaking their Toyota Tundra race vehicles.

Peters and Lofton now join a growing fraternity of drivers and teams that have tested at the totally refurbished Gresham oval which features NASCAR amenities such as data loop timing and scoring, enclosed garage areas and the same high-grip polymer asphalt that is used at several NASCAR tracks including Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Throw in the fact that GMP is located directly across the street from Jackson County Airport (19A) – a short 30-minute plane ride or a quick three-hour drive from the Charlotte

Bubba Pollard, Jason Hogan and Mike Garvey under the checkered flag in the season-opening event at GMP this season.
